Mr. L. Labory has this week gone to Los Angeles to close a deal for the sale of the Nopalera mine, near Posa. This is a valuable mine from which Mr. Labory has shipped ore with profitable returns for a number of years. The purchasers will operate it upon a more extensive scale and erect reduction machinery.

At Las Cruces, in one of the mines of the New York & Sonora Mining Co., on Thursday, a man named Manuel Morales, was killed by premature explosion of a blast at the bottom of a 200-foot shaft. The man had gone down to set off the blast, and before he rung to hoist the first explosion was heard. Seven explosions were counted. As he had nine fuses to light it is supposed he had some trouble in setting off the seventh, and the first exploded and killed him before he had time to light the eighth and ninth shots. Taking chances so hazardous is forbidden by the company, and the man met his death in violation of rules.
